HEAVY VEGETABLE SUPPLY RECEIVED IN MARKET HERE

Small Reductions In Prices Are Noted In Washington.

Washington food markets are marked today by heavy consignments of vegetables from nearby points, and by small reductions in many prices asked. At the same time the quality is better than earlier in the season.

Along farmers' row this morning dozens of countrymen were displaying seasonable edibles, at prices considerably less than the same wares were bringing a few days ago. Fruit and vegetable dealers are optimistic over the outlook for a splendid crop this season, which of strawberries, which has fallen short of expectations, although there was a fairly good crop harvested. There was not the supply on hand this morning to meet all demands, while prices ranged from $2 per crate to $3 per crate, with qualities good, however. The hot days of last week coupled with the fact that the drought of last summer did not allow the plants to "set" properly, is assigned as the cause for the shortage.

Huckleberries are selling at 15 cents per quart, with the supply plentiful. New potatoes are abundant, with prices more reasonable, and every in-dication for a bumper crop. The heavy rain of yesterday raised the hopes of all farmers and growers in nearby States.
